From Campus to the Courtroom: Recent Developments in Title IX Litigation – College and University Roundtable

The rising number of sexual misconduct reports on campus each year has led to a growing population of student respondents found responsible for violations and subjected to discipline. These students, often dissatisfied with the outcome of the campus disciplinary process, are increasingly resorting to litigation for vindication and monetary damages. This seminar will discuss recent developments and trends in respondent litigation in sexual misconduct matters, and provide strategies that colleges and universities may use to prevent and defend against such claims.

Ample time will be provided to respond to your questions.

Breakfast or lunch will be served.

There is no cost to attend.
