DECEMBER 14, 2016

WORCESTER (December 14, 2016) – – Bowditch & Dewey LLP announced today the sale of its property at 311 Main Street, Worcester to a business organization owned by its client, Cliff Rucker. Mr. Rucker is the owner of the Worcester Railers Hockey Club.

The arrangement includes a long-term lease for the firm and a substantial renovation and modernization of its offices. The firm, which has additional offices in Boston and Framingham, will continue to be headquartered at its present location in Worcester.

“Worcester is resurgent and we are making this transaction at the right time and with the right person. We are strong believers in Worcester’s future and have concluded that the sale of our property will better allow us to participate in that future by focusing on what we do best – delivering the highest quality of legal services,” said Bowditch & Dewey LLP Chairman Michael P. Angelini.

In addition to his hockey-related business interests, Mr. Rucker has made other investments in Worcester, including the purchase of other downtown real estate and a planned 100,000 square foot skating facility in the Canal District.
