Lynette Paczkowski Writes "To vaccinate or not to vaccinate: What happens when parents can't agree to vaccinate their child?" for the Worcester Business Journal

BY LYNETTE PACZKOWSKI • SEPTEMBER 28, 2021

Joint legal custody grants both parents equal rights to make major life decisions for their child. However, it may be challenging for some parents to come to a consensus on some decisions. Since parents who share legal custody of a child must agree on all non-emergency medical treatment, one challenge they may face is agreeing upon whether or not their child should get the COVID-19 vaccine. Lynette Paczkowski discusses what parents can do if they are unable to reach a consensus.

> Moreover, filing with the court does not come without risk. Asking the court to make the decision because the parents are unable to could put a parent's legal custody in jeopardy.
