Steve Altmann Spoke on “Special Considerations for Lending on Dams” at the Environmental Bankers Association Winter Conference (Webinar)

Due diligence regarding potential environmental risks is a common part of real estate transactions, and the potential liabilities to a property purchaser which can accrue due to environmental contamination are well understood. A less common, but equally important, due diligence process should occur when a property transaction involves a dam.

Steve Altmann and a panel discussed how dams pose a serious liability to lenders and are often misunderstood.
