Pulse Magazine Names Mark Borenstein to “People to Watch 2023” List

JANUARY 17, 2023

Pulse Magazine named Mark Borenstein to its “People to Watch 2023” list. Nominated by the magazine’s staff, the individuals selected represent the talent and ambition in Worcester and highlight who will take the city by storm this year.

Born and raised in Worcester, Mark attended UMASS Amherst and went to law school in Springfield. Being away from home helped him see his hometown in a whole new light and appreciate Worcester’s journey from a gateway city into a destination city.

“I moved back to Worcester in 2014 and that was really the beginning of Worcester’s renaissance. It was a really exciting time to begin a law career.”

Mark’s focus is real estate law and he’s been instrumental to the aforementioned renaissance. Clients turn to Mark for his broad knowledge of the local Worcester community, culture and businesses.

“I constantly think about how my work can help improve Worcester. I help developers bring new opportunities – commercial or private – into the city. I bring the home-grown vibe; I understand the city and the neighborhood. I appreciate the tension between the communities that are deeply rooted in the city and the new development so I work hard to be hypersensitive to that...”
