Bowditch Launches Building with Bowditch Blog to Cover Construction Law Issues Across New England

AUGUST 20, 2026

Bowditch is pleased to announce the launch of Building with Bowditch, a construction law blog focused on the legal and practical issues that arise before, during and after a project.

The blog will provide timely, accessible commentary for property owners, developers, contractors, subcontractors, architects, engineers and other construction industry participants doing business in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and throughout New England.

The blog team, consisting of attorneys in the firm's Litigation and Real Estate practice areas, will cover developments and recurring issues affecting the construction industry, including:

- Bid protests
- Mechanic's lien rights for contractors and design professionals
- Payment bond claims
- Change order and extra work claims
- Delay, inefficiency, productivity and impact claims
- Contract drafting, negotiation and termination
- Design and construction defects
- Warranty claims
- Product liability issues
- OSHA and workplace safety issues
- Public construction, procurement and prevailing wage issues

The goal of Building with Bowditch is to provide short, practical updates that help clients and industry contacts spot issues early, understand why they matter and know when to seek guidance.

Subscribe to the Building with Bowditch blog to stay up to date on construction law developments in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and throughout New England.
