OVERVIEW

Brian Mullin is a highly skilled and experienced lawyer who concentrates his practice in labor and employment and higher education law. Brian represents his clients in the full spectrum of labor and employment litigation matters, including wage and hour claims, discrimination actions, non-competition and trade secret disputes, and contract claims, in state and federal courts, in arbitration and mediation, and before state and federal agencies.

In addition, Brian provides higher education clients with advice and counsel in matters specific to colleges and universities, such as representation before the OCR, Title IX compliance and sexual misconduct matters, student and faculty issues, risk management, and governance matters. He is also an approved sexual misconduct investigator by United Educators, providing consulting services and training to colleges, universities and secondary schools on issues relating to preventing, investigating and responding to sexual misconduct.

Brian's clients range from entrepreneurs and small family-owned businesses to large colleges and national and international companies. Regardless of their industry, size or location, clients seek Brian out not only for his effectiveness and tenacity as a litigator, but for his skill in resolving sensitive and often complex issues in the workplace gained from lessons learned through litigation and his years of experience as a human resource executive prior to becoming an attorney.

Brian has extensive experience drafting policies, as well as all manner of employment-related agreements, including employment, compensation, commission, confidentiality, non-competition, and separation agreements. Brian works with clients to limit exposure to claims by conducting assessments of their employment practices and compliance obligations in areas such as leave administration, wage-and-hour practices, personnel actions, contract compliance, and Affirmative Action and EEO programs. Brian also develops drug testing and safety programs for clients and delivers training for employees at all levels. He also serves as a co-editor of the Campus Counsel blog.

Before Bowditch

Before becoming an attorney, Brian worked for many years as a human resource executive, gaining experience in several industries, including real estate development, finance, telecommunications and the public sector. Brian was an Associate in the labor and employment group of a large law firm before joining Bowditch & Dewey in 2009.

Brian retired from the military after more than 20 years. This included active service in the United States Marine Corps.

Besides work

Brian enjoys spending time with his family and can usually be found coaching or watching his three sons playing in local athletic leagues. Brian also provides pro bono legal services for disabled military veterans.

EXPERIENCE

Termination of Investigation and Dismissal of OSHA Whistleblower Claim

Brian successfully defended a client in the construction industry in connection with an OSHA investigation of a whistleblower complaint based on a former employee's allegations of improper containment and abatement of asbestos. The claim exposed the client to significant civil fines and liability for damages, as well as untold costs in connection with a potential shut down order for the client's marquee construction project. Brian responded to the claims on behalf of his client and obtained a termination of the investigation and full dismissal of the claim from OSHA without interruption to the project.

Wage & Hour Claims Dismissed on Summary Judgement

Brian successfully argued for the dismissal of wage and hour claims brought against his client in the Superior Court by a terminated senior executive. The Court agreed with Brian's arguments that the executive's claims did not fall within the scope of the wage act and dismissed the executives claims for more than $200,000 in mandatory restitution, triple damages and attorney's fees.

Successfully Resolved Grievances Brought by Faculty Members

When faculty members selected for termination brought grievances and threatened claims against a higher education client, Brian developed a response strategy which negated the basis for the grievances and resulted in a negotiated resolution of the threatened claims on terms favorable to the institution and upholding the decision to terminate.
